

THE PRAIRIE ART GALLERY

The Prairie Art Gallery is expanding! The historic 1929 Central Park School, despite being unexpectedly damaged in a roof collapse in March 2007, will form the cornerstone for the new Montrose Cultural Centre, a grand new gathering place for all, and the new home to the Grande Prairie Public Library. When this newly expanded (and repaired) complex opens in January 2009, the Gallery will offer more than double the exhibition space and more than double the educational space than it did in the Central Park School building alone up to 2007.

Since 1975 the Prairie Art Gallery has been providing opportunities for the community to experience the visual arts through exhibitions, art classes, festivals, publications and many other ways.

In 2007, the Gallery celebrated it's 32nd Anniversary. In the last thirty-two years the Gallery has had many homes including the Grande Prairie Regional College, the old Anglican Church, the old high school, and now in a temporary location in Station 2000, South of the Town Centre Mall. In the coming years, the Prairie Art Gallery will work towards opening a new building as part of the Montrose Cultural Centre.
